Excerpt: . . . some excellent land in Ohio, while the defendant owned some land in Iowa, which was supposed to be good land worth at least 10 per acre, but which was in fact very poor, wet land hardly worth 3 per acre. Neither party knew the actual condition of the Iowa land, but relied upon the statements of a third party, who thought he had inspected the land but had confused it with another tract. The court found no negligence and no fraud. The contract was rescinded. Wood v. Boynton 1 is the well-known diamond case of Wisconsin. The plaintiff found a stone about the size of a pigeons egg. She sold it to a jeweler, who bought it for one dollar as a specimen. Neither party knew its real character at the time. It turned out to be a diamond. The plaintiff, as it appeared, simply offered to sell it as a stone, without making any further inquiry, and the jeweler on his part simply offered to buy it as such. The court held that there was no mistake made by the vendor in delivering an article which was not the article sold. There was no mistake in fact as to the identity of the thing sold with the thing delivered upon the sale. Where there is such a mistake, the thing delivered is not the thing sold, and no title passes to the vendee by such delivery. This case was correctly decided, because, as...
