Hewitt.1 Mrs. Hewitt has become known entirely through her contributions to our periodical literature. I am not aware that she has written any prose, but her poems have been numerous and often excellent. A collection of them was published not long ago in an exquisitely tasteful form, by Ticknor Co., of Boston. The leading piece, entitled Songs of Our Land, was by no means the most meritorious, although the largest in the volume. In general, these compositions evince the author s poetic fervor, classicism of taste and keen appreciation of the beautiful, in the moral as well as in the physical world. No one of them, perhaps, can be judiciously commended as a whole, but no one of them is without merit, and there are several which would do credit to any poet in the land -- still even these latter...
