Many failures in re-enforcing operations in the past! are attributable to the lack of specific recommendation of certain species as suitable for the work. No species is suitable for all localities and in a very real sense the problem of selection of species for re-enforcing is a local one, to be solved by a study of local conditions. Summary. In increasing the quantity and quality of the timber carried by our woodlots, the immediate work of the woodlot owner lies along the following lines: 1. Distinguishing clearly between the woodlot and the woodpasture, giving to the woodlot the necessary conditions for its growth and development. 2. A recognition of the characteristics of a good woodlot as shown both in its positive and negative characters. 3. An attempt to bring the present stand into these conditions by gradual improvement cuttings,...
