It is suggested that this high proportion of nonimmunes may be related to the fact that most of the individuals in the group were reared in smaller communities where contact with diphtheria is less than in cities. During a four years period all nurses with positive Schick reactions were given injections of toxin-antitoxin, and as a result more than 80 per cent, were immunized. In a small number the Schick reaction remained positive after two series of toxin-antitoxin injections. As a result of the immunization, there was a decrease in the incidence of clinical diphtheria among these nurses of at least 90 per cents as compared to a previous three years period. It is relatively easy to protect an entire nursing staff from contracting diphtheria by the use of the Schick test and toxin-antitoxin injections, and this procedure should be carried out...
